Native Americans of Arkansas

People living in the land that is now Arkansas when Europeans came include:

- Caddo
- Chickasaw
- Osage
- Quapaw
- Tunica

Members of the above tribes were moved to Indian reservations in Oklahoma. Some members of these tribes escaped the removal. Their descendants live in Arkansas today.

The Cherokee were driven into Arkansas by the U.S. government. Descendants of those who escaped that removal have organized:

Western Cherokee Nation of Arkansas and Missouri
PO Box 606
Mansfield Missouri 65704

European Settlement

1539 - 1542: Hernando DeSoto assembled and financed a party of some 620 men, 500 beef cattle, 250 horses and 200 pigs. King Charles I of Spain ordered him to find gold, the Pacific Ocean and a direct passage to China. He embarked from Havana and landed on Florida’s West Coast. They traveled on land past Tampa Bay and then further north to present-day Georgia. After battles with the Creeks of present-day Georgia, DeSoto had lost nearly half of his men and his horses. He determined to press on towards the Mississippi River. They were the first Europeans to travel inland into present-day Georgia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, and Arkansas.

At a point near present-day Memphis, he built rafts and became the first European to cross the Mississippi River.

1673: Floating down the Mississippi River from the Great Lakes, Father Jacques Marquette and trader Louis Juliet reached the Quapaw villages of Arkansae and Kappa.

1682: French explorer René-Robert Cavelier (Sieur de la Salle) erected a cross near the confluence of the Mississippi River and the Gulf of Mexico, after floating down rivers from the Great Lakes area. He claimed the entire Mississippi Basin for Louis XIV of France.

1686: The French established Arkansas Post, the first white settlement. It failed as a French agricultural settlement, but it became the administrative center for the French, Spanish, and United States government until 1821.

1700: French missionaries arrived in the Osage and Quapaw villages. Their goal: convert the natives to Catholicism.

1721-1762: By 1721, several hundred French colonists abandoned Arkansas Post. The trading fort at Arkansas Post remained to protect French fur traders. It continued to be the focal point for trade with the Quapaw and Osage Indians.

1763: France lost most of its North American land at the end of the French and Indian War. It ceded the region to Spain.

1800: Spain officially returned the land to France, although Spanish occupancy continued until 1802. However, the French did not have troops to establish and protect a French government.

1803: The United States government acquired the area that is now Arkansas as part of the Louisiana Purchase. The area became part of the Louisiana Territory.

1810: Osage and Quapaw ceded land.

1812: The Louisiana Territory was renamed Missouri Territory, including present-day Arkansas in its boundaries.

Post-War of 1812: The Indian population decreased, and white settlers arrived to claim bounty land.

1813: The territorial legislature established Arkansas County.

1818: Quapaw Indians gave up lands between the Arkansas and Red Rivers. This opened the area to white settlement.

1819: Arkansas Territory was created, taken from the Missouri Territory.
1820: First Federal Census, all reported missing
1825-1826: Quapaw and Caddo removed to Red River Agency on Red River west of Arkansas.
1835: Most remaining Indian tribes were removed to Oklahoma.

Statehood
15 June 1836: Arkansas became a state.
1837: Settlers began arriving from southern states.
1861: Arkansas seceded from the Union.
1868: The state was readmitted to the Union.

Arkansas Birth Records
Indexes
FamilySearch.org has an index of Arkansas births from 1812 to 1965, based on church and civil records.

Births from 1881 to 1913

Births 1914 to the Present
Statewide registration of births began in 1914 in Arkansas with general compliance by the mid-1930s. Obtain a copy of a birth record of a person born from 1914 to the present from the Arkansas Department of Health.

The person obtaining a copy of a birth record of a person born within 100 years must be:
• The person on the certificate - Specific relatives - A person with a legal interest in the certificate

Other records that may mention or refer to births:
• Church records
• Military records
• Bible records
• Censuses
• Marriage records
• Obituaries
• Cemetery records

Arkansas Marriage Records
Indexes of Arkansas marriages
Ancestry.com and FamilySearch.org have indexes of Arkansas marriages for various years, from the late 1700’s into the 1900’s.

Marriages before 1917
Early marriage records were recorded by the county clerks, beginning with the creation of the county. Some were recorded as early as 1820. Obtain a copy of an early marriage record from the Clerk of the County where the marriage occurred.

Marriages 1917 to the Present
Beginning in 1917, counties were required to send copies of their marriage records to the state. Obtain a copy of a marriage record from 1917 to the present from the County Clerk or from the Arkansas State Department of Health.
Arkansas Death Records
Indexes
FamilySearch.org - Ancestry.com - Arkansas Department of Health

Deaths before 1914
Little Rock and Fort Smith began recording some deaths as early as 1881. The state did not require death registration until 1914.

Deaths from 1914 to Present
Arkansas statewide registration of deaths began in 1914, but compliance was not complete until the 1940s. Obtain a copy of an Arkansas Death Record dated from 1914 to the present from the County Clerk or from the Arkansas State Department of Health.
