Florida History:
The written records of early Europeans and archeological evidence are not conclusive about the names and locations of the indigenous peoples in what is now the state of Florida.

Early 1500's explorers gave indigenous peoples the following names and rough locations:
- Timucuans in the northeast;
- Abalachee (Apalachee) and Pensacola in the northwest;
- Tocobaga in the west-central;
- Calusa in the southwest;
- Tequesta (Tekesta) in the southeast;
- Jeaga, Jobe and Ais (pronounced 'ice') in the east-central

1565: Spanish explorers built a fort and city called St. Augustine in La Florida, their name for this area in North America.
1698: Pensacola was founded by the Spanish, but there was little significant European settlement in Florida until the late eighteenth century.

The native tribes of southern Florida were conquered and shipped to Cuba by the Spanish. Then the Seminole people came into that area. The Seminole were an alliance of Northern Florida and Southern Georgia natives that banded together in the 1700's to fight the European invaders and the Creek, Miccosukee, Hitchiti and Oconee tribes.

1763: Britain gained control of Florida at the close of the Seven Years' War (French and Indian War). Settlers from Europe and the American colonies to the north began to move into the area. The provinces of East Florida and West Florida were formed.

1783: Spain regained the Floridas and most of the British settlers left.

1790: Spain offered land grants and freedom to escaped slaves.

Early 1800's: Creek tribes from south Alabama and South Georgia migrated into West Florida. The Creek/Seminole people, more connected to the Georgia Creeks, centered near Perry, FL. Walton County was a center of action in the Creek wars of 1836-37.

The Uchees favored the Uchee Valley and down to Ft. Walton Beach, FL.

1812: The U. S. annexed portions of West Florida to Louisiana and to the Mississippi Territory.

1812, 1816 and 1817: Seminole Indian Wars - Seminoles lived generally from Apalachicola to the East and South. Osceola was a leading Seminole Chief 1804-1838. The wars ended in defeat for the Seminole.

1819: Spain ceded the remainder of West Florida and all of East Florida to the United States for $5,000,000.

1821: the United States officially began occupation.

30 March 1822: Florida Territory organized.

1822: A board of land commissioners for West Florida was established to process claims to lands previously granted by other nations. These claims are stored at the Florida State Archives.

18 September 1822: Treaty of Fort Moultrie between the United States and the Seminole Indians.

1823: A board of land commissioners for East Florida was established to process claims to land previously granted by other nations.
1835-1842: The Second Seminole War erupted because of the Treaty of Payne's Landing in 1832 and the attempts by the U.S. to remove Seminoles from Florida. At the close of the Seminole War, most of the Seminole were removed west to present-day Oklahoma; a few hundred escaped into the swamps.

3 March 1845: Florida became a state.

21 January 1850: U. S. government forced the remaining Florida Native Americans to migrate west. This removed most Indians from the Atlantic seaboard. A few remained on isolated reservations. Today some Seminole Indians live in the Lake Okeechobee area of Southern Florida.

1861: Florida seceded from the Union.

1868: Florida was readmitted to the Union.

1870-1900: The post-Civil War boom brought many settlers to Florida; developers built railroads and resorts.

1911: The Hollywood Indian Reservation was established for the Seminole people.

1921-1925 The last 13 of the state's 67 counties were organized as the Florida land boom attracted new settlers from the north.

1938: Big Cypress and Brighton Indian reservations were established.
