Indigenous Peoples

The tribes of people indigenous to the New England area had a common heritage and belonged to the Algonquian family. Their language was fairly common, and although each tribe had nuances, there was the ability to be understood from Cape Cod to Canada.

The Penacook inhabited what are now southern and central Massachusetts, northeastern Massachusetts and southeastern Maine. Their principle tribe lived around what is now Concord, New Hampshire. The Penacook had many subordinate tribes including the Nashua, Piscataquis, and the Winnipesaukee.

The Massachusetts (in Algonquian, “people of the great hills”), inhabited what is now the eastern area of the state, around what is now Boston. Originally one of the more powerful tribes, it was devastated by the plague and wars with the Abnaki. Their population declined from about 3,000 to 500 between 1615 and 1630.

The Wampanoag inhabited areas of what is now southeastern Massachusetts near where the Pilgrims landed in current Plymouth. They were also devastated by the plague. Metacomet (King Philip of “King Philip’s War”) was Wampanoag.

The Nipmucs, who inhabited what is now central Massachusetts, were a comparatively weak tribe who frequently paid tribute to their neighbors.

The Pocumtucks were a loose association of tribes that lived west of the Nipmucs in the areas around what is now Deerfield, Massachusetts.

Between 1616 and 1619 a plague, or the “Great Dying,” wiped out almost ¾ of New England Native American peoples. The devastation was worse in the coastal areas where mortality was as high as 95%. As a result, when European settlers began arriving, starting in 1620, they encountered very few of the indigenous population.

European Colonization

In 1620, the Mayflower arrived in the New World with 120 passengers. Mostly English Puritans and Separatists, more than half of those original settlers were dead before the first winter was over.

In 1621, a second ship arrived with 37 new settlers for Plymouth Colony. A year and half later, another two ships arrived carrying 96 passengers.

Several settlements were created over the course of the next few decades in this colony that occupied most of what is now southeastern Massachusetts.

The Massachusetts Bay Company attempted settlement again in 1628 and were successful with about 20,000 people migrating there before 1630. They lived in the area around what is now Boston and Salem. Soon other settlements were created and thriving.

1634 - Boston Common became the first public park in America.

1636 – Harvard became the first American college. Boston passed the first warning-out laws, which were intended to prevent non-residents from getting public assistance.

1675 - 1676 – King Philip's War was a series of skirmishes and battles between white settlers and a coalition of Native American tribes led by the Narragansetts. The war ended with the death of Chief Metacomet and enslavement of the remaining native peoples.

1691 – Massachusetts was granted a new charter by the crown of England. It became a royal 1692 – Witchcraft hysteria spread through Salem and several surrounding communities.

1756 – The Seven Years War (French and Indian War) was won by Great Britain. France gave England all French territory east of the Mississippi except New Orleans. Spain gave up east and west Florida to the English in return for Cuba.

1773 – As a protest against the Tea Act, the Sons of Liberty destroyed a shipment of tea in Boston.

1775 – The first battle of the American Revolution was fought at Lexington and Concord.

1776 – On 4 July 1776 the United States issued a Declaration of Independence.

1778 – France declared war against Britain and allied with American Revolutionary forces.

Independence and Statehood

1788 – Massachusetts became the 6th state admitted to the Union. The motto of the new state was translated as “By the sword we seek peace, but peace only under liberty.”

1790 - The first American public library was founded in Franklin.

1820 – Maine separated from Massachusetts.

1826 – The first American railroad was built in Quincy.

1831 – The Liberator, an anti-slavery newspaper, began publication in Boston.

1842 – Massachusetts enacted the U.S.’s first child labor law to regulate working hours.

1846 – Boston and New York City were connected by telegraph.

1852 – Massachusetts enacted a law that all school-age children must attend school.

1855 – The Married Women’s Property Act was passed. It allowed women who married after 1855 to keep their earnings separate from their husband's.

1861 – 1865: Massachusetts sent 159,165 men to serve the Union in the Civil War. The Springfield Armory was a major supplier of weaponry to the Union Army.

1897

- The first subway in the United States opened in Boston.
- The first Boston Marathon was held. Runners ran 15 miles from Ashland to Boston. It was extended to 26.2 miles in 1924.

1908 – A fire destroyed approximately 1,500 buildings in Chelsea, leaving thousands homeless.

1912 – Over 20,000 textile workers in Lawrence went on strike to protest working conditions and low pay. The “Bread and Roses” strike lasted for three months.

1913 – Massachusetts enacted a law prohibiting non-residents from marrying in the state if their marriage would not be legal in the state where they lived. This law was repealed in 2008.

1918 – A German U-boat fired on a tugboat and 4 barges off the coast of Orleans on Cape Cod.

Massachusetts Vital Records Indexes

- FamilySearch.org has indexes of Massachusetts births and marriages beginning in the 1600’s and of deaths beginning in the 1790’s.
- Ancestry.com has indexes of town records beginning in 1620 and of births, marriages and deaths beginning in 1700.
• The Massachusetts State Registry of Vital Records and Statistics keeps an alphabetical index of divorces beginning in 1952. The index directs readers to the proper probate court where a divorce was granted, to obtain a certified copy.

Local Vital Records
Cities and towns began recording births, marriages, and deaths in their jurisdictions from the beginning of their existence. They are still recording vital events. Obtain a copy of a birth, marriage, or death record from the local city or town clerk where the event occurred. A list of all the city and town clerks in Massachusetts can be found at: Massachusetts City and Town Directory - https://www.sec.state.ma.us/ele/eleclk/clkidx.htm

State Vital Records
The state began keeping copies of birth, marriage and death records in 1841. The Archives Division keeps copies of vital records from 1841 -1925. The Registry of Vital Records and Statistics keeps the records of all births, deaths, and marriages from 1926 to the present. Obtain a certified copy of a birth, marriage or death record from 1841 to 1925, from the Archives Division of the Secretary of the Commonwealth’s Office. Digital copies of vital records 1841 to 1920 – available at Digital Records at the Massachusetts Archives

Obtain a certified copy of a birth, marriage or death record from 1926 to the present from the Registry of Vital Records and Statistics.

Divorces are granted in Massachusetts County Probate Courts. Obtain a copy of a divorce record from the county Probate Court in which the divorce was granted.

• Ancestry.com – index of Watertown, MA, lands, grants, and possessions

Land Charters and Grants
• The earliest settlers were issued patents or charters directly or through various types of companies established for settlement and/or trade.
• Once Plymouth Colony and Massachusetts Bay Colony were settled, land was distributed by their colonial governments through grants.
• The Massachusetts State Archives has records and papers relating to proprietary grants, land claims, grants of bounty lands to soldiers, boundary disputes, and surveyors’ records.

Town Records – Early Private Land Sales and Ownership
• After proprietors sold their land or a town was incorporated, the town clerks recorded deeds, land sales and mortgages. These records are at the Town Halls; the Family History Library in Salt Lake City has copies of most of them.
County Land Records:

- Massachusetts Bay Colony established a county system in 1643; Plymouth Colony established counties in 1865.
- After a county was created, land sales and ownership were recorded at the County Registry of Deeds offices. Berkshire, Bristol, Essex, Middlesex, and Worcester counties have more than one office because they are divided into two or more land districts.
