New Service from Hayner Library
Text Message and E-mail Notifications Now Available!

The Hayner Public Library District is now offering text message and e-mail notifications for your requests and overdue notices.

Please ask at the Circulation Desk if you would like to receive a text message or e-mail message when your requested items are ready for pickup. The staff will be happy to assist you in making this change to your library account.

PLEASE NOTE: Text message and e-mail notifications are automated. These messages are NOT sent out in “real time.” The Illinois Heartland Library System software generates text messages and e-mails at 10 a.m., 2 p.m., and 6 p.m. daily. You will receive a separate text message for each item that is ready to be picked up or is overdue. If you sign up for text message or e-mail notifications, you will receive BOTH overdue notices AND pickup notifications this way. You will no longer receive a phone call from a staff member regarding your items ready to be picked up or overdue materials.

Note: E-mails and texts will be sent from SHARE Notifications and NOT from Hayner Library. SHARE is the automated network of libraries within the Illinois Heartland Library System.

As always, you can view your library account online at www.haynerlibrary.org.

Preparing for and Navigating College: What Do I Do Next?

The Hayner Public Library District is offering a question-and-answer session on what college-bound high school students need to do to prepare for college: What tests do I need to take? How do I apply for scholarships? What can I do to make the transition from high school to college easier? How soon should I start applying to colleges? What's the difference between a 2-year college and a 4-year university? What sort of long-term goals should I have before choosing a college? I'm in a 2-year college; how do I transition to a 4-year college? All of these questions and more can be answered in your quest to continue your education. It is a tricky field to navigate, and having extra information can make a big difference.

Dr. Brad Noble from Southern Illinois University–Edwardsville is the moderator of this session, providing guidance to those who are lost when it comes to college. He can also answer general questions about majors, especially in the hard sciences areas.

Dr. Noble earned a doctorate from Washington University in St. Louis, has won several teaching awards, and has served on many scholarship committees. Since 1996 he has been a member of the faculty in the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering at SIUE, where he has taught 19 different classes, three of which he developed. He co-authored a successful patent in 2013.

This program is for high school students, current college students, and their parents, or anyone else who may have questions about college. Be prepared to take notes! This program will be held Monday, March 14, 6:00–7:30 p.m. in the Multipurpose Room at the Alton Square location. Please call 1-800-613-3163 to reserve your spot.

You don't have to be able to read to enjoy a good library book! Babies love looking at the faces, bright colors, and contrasting patterns in board books. Come check out our board book collections at the Alton Square and Downtown library locations and share the joy of reading with your youngest family members!
John Gibbons is a generous soul with a zeal for detail. Many years ago John began volunteering at the library, graciously doing any and all things asked of him. He didn’t just volunteer his time and talents; he poured his whole heart into many varied tasks.

Always with a smile, John walks into the library with a calm yet vibrant cheerfulness. His laughter, which always follows his entrance, makes everyone around him feel happy.

Recently, after years of hard work and an unfailing determination, John finished two large research projects documenting the history of two local parochial schools, St. Matthew and St. Patrick. John didn’t just sit at a table and wait for information to come to him; he took hold of his projects and hit the road. To supplement his own research work, he travelled to Springfield, Illinois, to visit the Catholic Diocese and search through historical documents archived in their collection.

John sent numerous letters to people who had been connected with the schools asking for photographs or their help in identifying subjects in photos. He spent countless hours searching through back issues of The Telegraph newspaper to find interesting stories, graduation listings, and historical tidbits about each school. He never put an end to a project without exhausting all the resources he could find, and even then he did it reluctantly. He was always in hunt mode, unhurriedly looking just a little longer and a little farther.

When John had gathered all the information and photos he could locate, he began the daunting task of organizing the copious amounts of material he had collected. He also made any needed copies, typed up the entire text, made cover pages, indexed each project, and then printed it out and put it into a large binder. He then submitted the entirety to the Genealogy & Local History Library to be added to the Illinois Room collection.

The library, recognizing John’s efforts in producing such a detailed collection of historical records, sent the first binder to be professionally bound. John was so pleased with the result that, out of his own pocket, he sent the second book to the bindery. When the books were returned they were cataloged, processed, and quickly added to the collection.

Over the next few months, the books were used almost every day. In fact, the staff of the Genealogy & Local History Library decided to stop re-shelving the books each night and instead leave them on the counter of the service desk because they were being requested so frequently. There were a few times the books were in use as another patron waited.

Sanborn Fire Insurance Maps–Not Your Typical Road Map!

In 1867 Daniel Alfred Sanborn, a surveyor from Massachusetts, began creating a unique type of map of several United States cities. These maps were tools for helping insurance companies assess the potential risks of fire hazards for urban area buildings. This talented entrepreneur’s undertaking would soon become the mapping enterprise known as the Sanborn Map Company.

Today these richly detailed maps are a valuable resource for anyone interested in historical land or property research. They also are beneficial in preservation and restoration efforts. Widely used by architects, urban planners, and land developers, they can be an informative resource for anyone involved in researching individual properties, neighborhoods, or whole towns.

The maps provide an abundance of information such as building outline and size; construction materials used in the framing, flooring, and roof; the placement of windows, doors, and chimneys; street names; and house numbers. Also represented on the maps are details on the roadways such as street and sidewalk widths, boundaries, underground pipelines, wells, water mains, fire hydrants, and railroads. In short, the Sanborn Maps enable researchers to trace the architectural history of an individual building or the development of entire communities.

Sanborn Fire Insurance Maps (1867–1970) for the state of Illinois are available in digital format at the Hayner Genealogy & Local History Library at 401 State Street. Come browse this database collection of historical state maps and see what you can find out about your house or neighborhood. Digital images of the Sanborn Fire Insurance Maps can be viewed and printed in just a few easy steps.

Curiouser and Curiouser!

This year marks the 150th Anniversary of Lewis Carroll's classic Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. If you dare, fall down the rabbit hole and encounter a few fun facts about this beloved book that will leave you as mad as a hatter and seeing Cheshire cats!

- Lewis Carroll’s real name was Charles Lutwidge Dodgson.
- It is said, but never proven, that the Dodo character was based on Charles Dodgson (AKA Lewis Carroll), who had a terrible stutter and would often stammer his last name: Do-Do-Dodgson.
- Alice’s character was based on a real-life little girl named Alice Liddell. However, unlike the character, who is blonde, Liddell was a brunette.
- The novel began as a way to entertain Alice Liddell and her sisters during a rowboat excursion. The story expanded over the course of several more rowboat trips when the girls, especially Alice, persistently wanted to hear more.
- The very first copy of the book was a Christmas present to Alice Liddell in 1864. A year later Lewis Carroll expanded the book and self-published it for the public.
- The original book given to Alice Liddell in 1864 did not include The Mad Hatter and The Cheshire Cat. It was after Carroll expanded the story that they appeared.
- It is speculated that Lewis Carroll suffered from dysmetropsia. This rare neurological disorder, discovered in 1955, causes strange hallucinations, making the affected person feel bigger or smaller than they really are—just like Alice in the book! It is so widely believed that Lewis Carroll suffered from this disorder that it has even been dubbed Alice in Wonderland Syndrome.
- The novels were banned in China in 1931, on the grounds that “animals should not use human language.” The ban has since been removed.
- The original title was Alice's Adventures Underground. Rejected titles include Alice's Hour in Elfland, Alice Among the Goblins, and Alice Among the Fairies.
- The original novel was illustrated by Carroll.
- The Mad Hatter is one of the most classic characters in Wonderland. Although he and the March Hare are described as being mad, his actual name in the book is only The Hatter.
- The Hatter’s riddle: Why is a raven like a writing desk? was never intended to have an answer. However, the most popular answer created over the years is: Poe wrote on both.
- The character name The Mock Turtle is taken from a popular dish of the time: Mock Turtle Soup.
- In film adaptations, The Mock Turtle is played by a diverse group of actors, including Cary Grant, Ringo Starr, and Gene Wilder!
- Within the 150 years since its release Alice's Adventures in Wonderland has never been out of print.
- Early fans of the book included Queen Victoria and Oscar Wilde.

Spook Handy

Remembering Pete Seeger

Tuesday, February 23, 6:30 p.m.

Spook had the honor of performing with the great Pete Seeger in over 50 concerts. He says, “Pete taught me to always know the first song or two you are going play at a concert. After that, you should have a good feel for what the audience appreciates, and you tailor the rest of your set to that.

“Whether the thread turns out to follow the chronology of Pete’s life, trace the wisdom he collected over the years and embedded into his songs, or express the values of community, environment, peace, and justice he lived, every concert is chock-full of songs everyone can sing: old classics, newer songs written late in his life, songs others wrote that he popularized, and songs I have written or revised under Pete’s tutelage. You’ll also hear some of the stories behind the songs as they were told to me by Pete.” Join us for a great evening remembering a folk master. Register at 1-800-613-3163.

Starting with the creation of accounts, we will then explore the uses and benefits of both sites, including sending Tweets and Pinning to a Board, uploading a Pin, and the art of “Following” people. This class is presentational only. You do not need to bring laptops and tablets.
The surprising benefits of reading before bed

We’re all commitment phobes. We scan, we skim, we browse, but rarely do we read.

Our eyes pingpong back and forth from Facebook posts to open chat boxes, unclicked e-mails to GIFs of dancing cats, scanning for keywords but barely digesting what we see. Average time spent on an online article is 15 seconds.

In 2014, the Pew Research Center revealed that one-quarter of American adults hadn’t read a single book in the previous year.

And that’s a shame because those who read consistently exhibit significantly greater memory and mental abilities at all stages in life. They’re also better public speakers, thinkers and, according to some studies, better people in general.

Cracking open a book before you go to bed could help combat insomnia, too: A 2009 study from researchers at University of Sussex showed that six minutes of reading reduces stress by 68% (more relaxing than either music or a cup of tea), thus clearing the mind and readying the body for sleep.

The reasoning, per psychologist and study author Dr. David Lewis, is that a book is “more than merely a distraction, but an active engaging of the imagination,” one that “causes you to enter an altered state of consciousness.”

It doesn’t matter if your book of choice is by James Patterson or James Joyce, fiction or fact, as long as it you find it fully absorbing.

Because when the mind is engaged in a world constructed by words, tension evaporates and the body relaxes, paving the way for sleep.

Volunteer Profile

It is funny how life comes full circle sometimes. Carol Sobotta and I have known each other for many years. Her husband, Don, was my history teacher in high school. My husband, Harry, started teaching with Don his first year of teaching at Central Jr. High. Carol taught with Harry for many years at East Middle School. So our lives have intertwined with each other for the last 40 years.

Carol began volunteering for Hayner Library in 2009. She has a very busy life but finds her love of reading keeps her interested in our library. She volunteers in the Interlibrary Loan Department and keeps the library at Glenview Gardens replenished with fresh books.

I love to ask questions about my volunteers’ lives. I usually send them a questionnaire when we feature them in our newsletter. This is what I have learned about Carol.

Carol grew up in Dwight, a small community in Illinois. When she was in third grade her family moved from a farm into town. Carol had to change schools and had a very hard time adjusting to the new school. Her teacher was a very kind person who influenced Carol’s love for reading. Carol loved to hear her teacher read out loud to the class. Her family had an old chicken house in the back yard, and Carol converted it to her schoolhouse where she bossed all the neighborhood children and pretended to be the teacher. So that is when she knew that she wanted to be a teacher when she was older.

Carol was the second oldest of four children. There were two boys and two girls. Her parents expected the children to do chores around the house and to eventually earn their own spending money. Carol babysat and delivered newspapers. She rode her bike or pulled the papers in the snow with a sled. She always earned good tips. Her parents always encouraged them to save their earnings and spend wisely.

She joined the 4-H Club and learned sewing, crafts, and cooking. She was president one year and was selected at the Livingston County Fair to go to State Fair for her coffeecake demonstration. Her other activities included piano lessons, church, and various clubs in high school.

Carol loved going to school. Her grades were very important to her. She was on the honor roll all through high school and was awarded a four-year teacher scholarship to Illinois State University in Normal, Ill. After graduation her first teaching position was in Streator, Ill., as a second-grade teacher.

After two years of teaching she decided to move to a bigger city. Her new teaching position was in Alton teaching first grade. The first fall her assistant principal introduced her to her future husband, Donald Sobotta. He was a high school history teacher. They were married the next spring. She and Don have celebrated 46 years of marriage. Don became assistant principal in various junior high schools until he resigned to pursue his dream of having his own printing business.

Carol and Don have a daughter, Melissa, who is a substitute teacher in Streator, Ill. The Sobottas have two wonderful grandsons, who are 8 and 12 years old. The boys are excellent readers and great students. The Sobottas make frequent visits to see the kids and Carol’s mother, who is 96 years old and still living in her own home. Carol’s mother is an avid reader, and they often recommend books to each other. Carol’s younger brother and sister live in Dwight, and her older brother lives in Kankakee. Her father passed away in 1994.

When her daughter was in sixth grade, Carol was offered a position in sixth grade teaching language arts, social studies, and sometimes science. One of her greatest hopes was to be able to foster a love of reading in her students. There is no doubt in my mind that she got her wish. Carol and her team partner, Sandy Dean, applied for a grant and started the Accelerated Reading program at East Middle School. Students earned points when answering questions about books that they read. Those points earned prizes for the students. This program is still used in middle school. This was a great accomplishment for Carol and Sandy. Carol was also involved with Young Authors, Student Council, and a drug prevention program.

After 32 years of teaching, Carol retired in 2004. She became a substitute librarian for four years in the Middle School library. She loved working in the library and joined Hayner volunteers in 2009. That was certainly a lucky day for Hayner.

Besides volunteering for Hayner, Carol keeps busy with many activities. She belongs to Old Friends and New and two book clubs and enjoys cooking, gardening, and jigsaw puzzles, computer games, walking, and Zumba gold classes. She and her husband are members of Messiah Lutheran Church, where she started a library and taught Sunday school for many years. She and Don are Jeopardy fans and Cardinal fans. She has kept her love of reading—as Don says, when she is not doing all these activities, her nose is in a book.

Carol’s love of reading brought her full circle into the lives of many children and adults in our community.

We are so lucky to have Carol as a volunteer for Hayner.

Thank You, Patrons!

For the month of October 2015, we ran a fine amnesty program that allowed patrons to return overdue materials and have their fines waived if the materials were returned with a nonperishable food item. Look at what we collected! This was a win-win event. Patrons were relieved of their fines, and Hayner got the overdue materials back on the shelves. All the food items have been delivered to the Crisis Food Center in Alton. Thanks, everyone, for participating.
What Makes a Cozy Just That?

Imagine your terror at finding out that Jessica Fletcher was moving from Cabot Cove to your neighborhood! Would you stay up at night just wondering when this unassuming, friendly woman was going to befriend you? Would you wonder which of your friends would be the first, and then second, third, even fourth to die? I have loved watching Jessica solve all the murders in Cabot Cove, and then, when she ran out of neighbors, have to move to New York. If you are reading this article about cozy mystery books, you probably have enjoyed watching Jessica solve her way through one community after the next. She is a prime example of a Cozy Mystery Heroine. Cozy mysteries have become a booming business. Many cozy mystery readers are intelligent women looking for a “fun read” that engages the mind, as well as provides entertainment . . . something to “look forward to getting back to.” This is not to say that intelligent men don’t read cozies . . . they do!

The crime-solver in a cozy mystery is usually a woman who is an amateur sleuth. Almost always, she has a college degree, whether she is using it or not. Her education and life’s experiences have provided her with certain skills that she will utilize in order to solve all the crimes that are “thrown her way.” The cozy mystery heroine is usually a very intuitive, bright woman. The occupations of the amateur sleuths are very diverse: caterer, bed and breakfast owner, quilter, cat fancier/owner, nun, gardener, librarian, bookstore owner, herbalist, florist, dog trainer, homemaker, teacher, needlepoint store owner, etc. These are just a few examples of what the amateur sleuth does. When she’s not solving crimes, that is!

The cozy mystery usually takes place in a small town or village. The small size of the setting makes it believable that all the suspects know each other. The amateur sleuth is usually a very likeable person who is able to get the community members to talk freely (i.e., gossip) about each other. There is usually at least one very knowledgeable and nosy (and of course, very reliable!) character in the book who is able to fill in all of the blanks, thus enabling the amateur sleuth to solve the case.

Although the cozy mystery sleuth is usually not a medical examiner, detective, or police officer, a lot of times her best friend, husband, or significant other is. This makes a very convenient way for her to find out things that she would otherwise not have access to. . . . Do you know any caterers or dog trainers who have access to autopsy reports? I don’t! (Unless you count some of my favorite cozy characters.)

At the same time, it is probably safe to say that the local police force doesn’t take the amateur sleuth very seriously. They dismiss her presence, almost as if she doesn’t exist. This, of course, makes it convenient for her to “casually overhear” things at the scene of a crime.

More and more, cozy mystery books are being written as parts of a series. The reader becomes emotionally involved and connected with the reoccurring characters. It’s almost as if the reader is “going home” to a familiar place when she reads her next cozy mystery book in a series. (Of course, publishers of these series must enjoy knowing that fans of a series guarantee the success of each book in the series. It’s not uncommon for fans of a cozy mystery series to pre-order a book before it is available at the stores.)

In a series, it is important that the characters are likeable, so that the reader will want to visit them again. The supporting characters are equally important to the reader. It is for this reason that there are so many funny, eccentric, and entertaining secondary characters. Can you imagine wanting to read the second book in a series that has all of its characters as scummy, lowlife people, perpetrating evil deeds and being downright mean all the time?

* Cozy mysteries are considered “gentle” books . . . no graphic violence, no profanity, and no explicit sex. Most often, the crime takes place “offstage” and death is usually very quick. Prolonged torture is not a staple in cozy mysteries! The victim is usually a character who had terrible vices or who treated others very badly. Dare I say . . . the victim “deserved to die”? And there are usually connections between the victims (if indeed there are multiple victims . . . which usually, in a cozy mystery, there are!), even though the reader is not aware of the obvious connections until the amateur sleuth solves the crimes.

* Sex (if there is any) is always behind closed doors. It is implied . . . at most! Two characters may go from having a late-night, romantic dinner to—fast forward—one person taking a cup of coffee up to their partner, who is enjoying the delicious luxury of sleeping in. Enough said!

Cozy mysteries tend to be fast-paced, with several twists and turns throughout each book. There are usually several red herrings to provide distracting clues to the reader. The amateur sleuth is able to sift through the clues, tossing the useless information out while analyzing the good clues. There is a lot of puzzle solving involved in a cozy mystery.

The cozy mystery puts an emphasis on plots and character development. You definitely could not convert a cozy mystery novel into an “action movie” with a lot of car chases and young, gratuitously topless actresses! An expression comes to mind that could easily differentiate the cozy mystery from other types of mysteries . . . “Brains over Brawn” every time.
