The people living in the area now called Ohio when Europeans arrived included:

- The Erie tribe
- The Kickapoo
- The Shawnee
- The Delaware
- The Miami
- The Ottawa
- The Mingo (Ohio Seneca)
- The Wyandot

Most of these people were forced to leave Ohio during the Indian Removals of the 1800's. They were moved to reservations in what is now Oklahoma.

At one time both France and Great Britain laid claim to the Ohio area.

After the Northwest Territory was established, and the Treaty of Greenville signed, thousands of settlers came to the Ohio region. Among the early settlers were Revolutionary War soldiers who had been given bounty lands in southeast Ohio for their military service.

The Harrison Land Act in 1800 enabled settlers to purchase land in the Northwest Territory. Many people came, which led Ohio to become the 17th state on March 1, 1803.

To connect with trade to the Eastern states, Ohio built a 1,000-mile long canal system of eighty-three locks called the Ohio and Erie Canal, opening in 1825. This provided means for Ohio farmers, foresters and miners to sell their goods.

The railroad arrived in the mid 1800's, turning Ohio into a crossroads for trade and migration.

Ohioans were instrumental in smuggling freedom seeking slaves to Canada through the Underground Railroad. This resulted in a scattering of small African American communities serving as temporary safe havens in southeastern Ohio.

- Cincinnati Birth and Death Records, 1865-1912 - <http://digital.libraries.uc.edu/collections/birthdeath/>

County registrations of births and deaths officially began in 1867. These records were kept by the Probate Court; they are incomplete.

A few counties have records dating from the 1840s. These records may include the names of the parents and their place of residence.

Contact the county Probate Court for information about which years of Birth and Death Records are available.

Birth and Death Records, Fetal Death Records, Stillbirth Certificates 1908 to the present

In 1908, the state passed a law standardizing the record forms and requiring registration of all births and deaths.

State registered birth records usually contain a child's name, place and date of birth, sex, race, and the names and birthplaces of the parents.

Death records usually include a child's name, place and date of death, sex, age at death, marital state, place of birth, names of parents, occupation, cause of death, and last residence.

Purchase Copies of Vital Records from the Ohio Bureau of Vital Statistics:

- Birth records 1908 to the present
- Death records from 1964 to the present

Ohio Marriage Records

Individual counties began recording marriages from the date the county was created. These records can include marriage records, marriage returns, marriage consents of minors by parents, and ministers' license records.

County marriage records listed the names of the bride and groom, the date of the marriage, the county in which the marriage occurred, and the officiating individual. After 1900, some records included the ages and residences of the bride and groom and the names of the parents.

Obtain a copy of a marriage record from the Probate Court of the county where the record was created.

Obtain a copy of a divorce decree from the County Clerk of the county in which the divorce was finalized.

Statewide marriage registration began in 1949. However, marriage and divorce records are NOT maintained by the Ohio State Bureau of Vital Statistics.

Note: County boundaries shifted often; check the records of parent counties.

Ohio Land Records

The state of Ohio was created from the Ohio Territory in 1803.

Early Ohio settlers purchased land from the Federal Government or from Land Companies.

Search for a land patent granted by the Federal Government to your ancestor on the Bureau of Land Management website – www.glorerecords.blm.gov . Use the patent information to request the corresponding land entry case file from the National Archives.

Veterans of the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812 were often given military land warrants (bounty warrants) by the Federal Government as payment for their service. The U.S. Military District of Ohio was an area in the center of the state. Virginia awarded lands to its claimants in the Virginia Military District in southwest Ohio. View the Virginia Military District Bounty Warrants and rejected claims on Virginia Memory – www.virginiamemory.com

Search a database of U.S. Military District warrants on Ancestry.com.

Land in north central Ohio was reserved for residents of Connecticut towns that were burned during the American Revolution. View information about the “Firelands” on the websites of The Western Reserve Historical Society < www.wrhs.org > and the Firelands Historical Society www.firelandsmuseum.com

Find deeds of private land sales in County Recorders’ Offices. Due to county border disputes, records of pre-1837 land sales in Williams, Fulton, and Lucas counties may be located in the Michigan counties of Hillsdale, Lenawee, and Monroe.
