Hayner Laptops and Hotspots Available for Check Out

The Hayner Public Library District is pleased to announce that we now have laptops and hotspots available for check out at the Downtown Library and Hayner Library at Alton Square Mall.

Each laptop is equipped with a mouse, Microsoft Office programs (Word, Excel, and PowerPoint), a web camera, and ports for flash drives (so you can save your work). The hotspots allow users (both individuals and groups) to link a laptop, phone, or tablet to a free high-speed internet connection. For security purposes, the memory on each laptop is erased every time the computer is restarted. Patrons should use a flash drive to save all work; flash drives are available for purchase at the library for $3.00 each if needed.

Funding for this program was made possible through the Illinois State Library’s Expanding Digital Inclusion: Transforming Library Services grant.

- Patrons must be a Hayner Library cardholder in good standing (unexpired card and no outstanding fines over $5.00).
- Patrons must be age eighteen or older to check out a laptop or hotspot.
- Patrons must fill out a Library Electronic Device Agreement form when checking out a laptop or hotspot.
- Laptops and hotspots can be checked out for two weeks and can be renewed once if no other patrons are waiting for a device.
- Overdue fees are $5.00 per day, per device. Wi-Fi service will be turned off to any overdue hotspot devices.
- For security and privacy reasons, the laptops are programmed to delete any information saved to the computer each time the device is rebooted. Therefore, patrons must use their own flash drive to save all work.
- Laptops and hotspots cannot be returned in the book drop; patrons must return the devices to the Hayner Library location from which they were checked out.
- Patrons are responsible for returning the devices in working order and with all components intact. Patrons are responsible for replacement costs for any lost or damaged devices and components.

Check it Out!

Hayner Library Offers Fort Building Kits for Children

The Hayner Public Library District will soon offer fort building kits for our young patrons. The 120-piece kits contain plastic tubes and connectors, as well as instructions to create a variety of different shapes and structures.

These building kits are an exciting way for children to utilize hands-on STEAM (science, technology, engineering, art, and math) skills while designing and building their ultimate fort. The kits provide an opportunity for children to share new and creative structures with friends and family.

Since 1852, the creation, maintenance, and expansion of (what is now) The Hayner Public Library District has been made possible by the tireless work and dedication of staff, volunteers, donors, Jennie D. Hayner Library Association, and The Hayner Public Library District Board of Trustees. The amount of strategy, effort, and creativity that has gone into the success of this library district is truly inspiring.

This article focuses on the years 1972 to 2022, in celebration of the Golden Anniversary of The Hayner Public Library District. For more information about the early years of Hayner Library, please see Better Than They Knew: A History of Public Library Service in Alton, written by Pamela R. Klipsch. This book, written for the celebration of the Hayner Memorial Building Centennial (1891-1991), and others related to Hayner Library history are available in the Hayner Genealogy & Local History Library, 401 State Street, Alton.

A public library district differs from a city or county library in that it is a wholly independent local governmental unit. Public library districts are created by an election or a conversion of a pre-existing library. On January 25, 1972, Alton voters approved the referendum to establish the independent Hayner Public Library District. Prior to this election, the library had operated first as a subscription library and then a city library.

A library center in the Godfrey Town Hall opened in the late spring, Monday through Friday, with over 1,500 items. The new district began operation on July 5, 1972. Just weeks later, and despite expanded services, including the Godfrey library center, bookmobile services, children's programming, and mail-order paperback services, Godfrey and Foster Township voters opted not to join the library district by a five-to-one margin. Godfrey and Foster Township residents who lived in the Alton School District could still purchase non-resident library cards to use Hayner Library services.

In 1973, the library's collection was 80,000 books and periodicals, 3,000 recordings, 300 8mm and 16mm films, and subscriptions to 200 magazines and fifteen newspapers.

On October 6, 1974, an open house was held to celebrate the newly-refurbished Hayner Memorial Library building as the Hayner Children's Library. The library has offered a children's Summer Reading Program annually since at least the 1950s, and Hayner Library has always tried to be a welcoming place to children. Also in October 1974, Hayner Library began offering Sunday hours for the first time in its history.

In 1978, the library purchased the former Tri-City Grocery building at 326 Belle Street, which now houses the current Downtown Library. The library had leased this property and two adjoining properties since 1970.

In June 1981, the Friends of the Hayner Public Library District group was formed.

In 1985, the Alton Square branch library opened at the Alton Square Mall. It was one of the first full-service branch libraries to operate in a shopping mall in the United States and the very first in Illinois. The library branch, whose storefront was covered with gift wrap and a giant bow, was “unwrapped” by Illinois Secretary of State Jim Edgar and Hayner Board Chairman Forrest Cook. The Alton Square Mall library branch was made possible by a grant from the Illinois Library System. Its continuation beyond the first year depended entirely on the expansion of the district to the rest of the Alton School District. Luckily, the following year, on March 18, 1986, a new referendum on Godfrey and Foster Townships joining the library district passed with a margin of seventy-nine percent.

The annual Hayner Library “Food for Fines” drive began in the late 1980s and continues to this day. Each fall, Hayner Library patrons with overdue materials can pay their fines with non-perishable food items, which the library then donates to the Crisis Food Center in Alton.

In June 1987, increasing maintenance costs and the success of the Alton Square branch led the library to discontinue the bookmobile service. In the fall of 1987, the library began providing delivery of books to library users who were temporarily or permanently homebound through the Hayner Homebound service. The service also provided books to area nursing homes and retirement centers.

In August 1987, Hayner Library announced that the Children’s Library had become the Young People's Library. The young adult books were moved to the Hayner Memorial Library building in the fall, and services for teens ages thirteen to sixteen increased. The young adult area had a record player with headphones and a record collection that included a selection of rock music.

On Sunday, October 1, 1989, the renovated Main Library (now the Downtown Library) at 326 Belle Street reopened to the public. The renovation featured a new brick exterior, new windows, carpeted floors, new books shelves, and a new computer. The renovation and restoration of the Hayner Memorial Library building at 401 State Street then began. The library’s ninety-nine-year-old slate roof was replaced. Other repairs included repairing mortar, installing a new air conditioning system, and making the restrooms and doors accessible to all patrons. The grand opening and dedication of the building occurred on May 19, 1991. More than 100 visitors came to the celebration, and harpist Amy Conrady played at the event.

In 1992, The Hayner Public Library District began mailing the quarterly newsletter to every address in the district.

In 1993, Hayner Library's card catalog was replaced by a computerized catalog of the library's 184,000 holdings. The task of entering titles and holdings into computer files took more than three years. Hayner Library's newly-computerized catalog was then linked with other members of the regional Lewis & Clark Library System, allowing Hayner Library patrons to see the holdings of other system libraries and electronically request those items through interlibrary loan.

In 1995, the Hayner Youth Library became the first site in Illinois to launch the rod and reel loaner program in a partnership with the Urban Fishing Program of the Illinois Department of Natural Resources. Hayner Library is still part of the program to this day.

In late 1999, Hayner Library upgraded the computers and began offering internet access thanks to a per capita grant through the state.

In 2001, Hayner Library began the annual “Food for Fido” program. Every April, Hayner Library patrons with overdue materials can pay their fines in pet food, which the library then donates to the Alton Area Animal Aid Association.

In 2003, Therapy Dog International (Chapter 310) and The Hayner Public Library District staff joined forces to create our Bow-wow Pow-wow reading program. The program enables children of all ages to read an age-appropriate short story of their choice to a certified pet therapy dog. The program intends to make reading fun and boost children’s confidence in reading aloud. As word of the success of this program has spread, Hayner Library staff have been contacted by libraries as far away as Colorado and North Carolina who are interested in starting their own reading programs.

In 2006, The Hayner Public Library District was presented with the Illinois Centennial Award by the Illinois State Historical Society. The award is presented to Illinois businesses and not-for-profit corporations celebrating 100 or more years of continuous operation in recognition of their economic and cultural contributions to the state. Also honored at the 2006 Centennial Awards Banquet were the State Journal-Register, the Chicago History Museum, the Lincoln Park Zoo, and the Chicago Cubs.

On March 21, 2009, Hayner Library at Alton Square Mall moved to its present location on the mall’s lower level. State Senator Bill Haine (who worked as a Page at Hayner Library when he was a teenager) cut the ribbon. Illinois Secretary of State Jesse White and his Jesse White Tumbling Team were there to celebrate. Musical ensemble Bach to the Future performed, and Izzy the Grizzly, mascot of the Gateway Grizzlies baseball team, greeted patrons. During the first week, presentations by staff from the St. Louis Science Center, the St. Louis Zoo, and the Butterfly House added to the excitement. WBGZ Radio conducted its morning broadcast from the library on March 23.

The renovated Hayner Memorial Library building opened as the Genealogy & Local History Library on May 21, 2011, the 120th anniversary of the library building. During the renovation, the stained glass windows were moved from the annex to the current position above the Illinois Room doorways. The display cases and the circular desk area were also added, as well as the Tiffany-style chandelier in the foyer. The Illinois Room now houses the Genealogy & Local History collection, which contains more than 9,000 books and other cataloged items.

In 2017, the Genealogy & Local History Library became a Passport to Your National Parks stamp site. Alton is part of the Abraham Lincoln National Heritage Area (ALNHA) and was named an official “Looking for Lincoln” community in September 2017. That designation allowed local organizations to become part of the ALNHA’s National Park Service passport program. The library has many historic books about Abraham Lincoln and Lincoln photographs and artifacts are generally on display. In the mid-1850s, Lincoln’s law partner, William Herndon, was a speaker in the Alton Library Association’s lecture series.

In 2018, Hayner Library began providing a StoryWalk® at several local parks. StoryWalk® is an outdoor reading experience in which the library staff deconstructs a children’s book (chosen by our children’s librarian), laminates the pages, and places them in a weatherproof metal storyboard along a path. There are now permanent Hayner Library StoryWalk® markers on the Frog Trail at The Nature Institute in Godfrey.

The yoke of the printing press thrown into the Mississippi River the night that an angry mob murdered Elijah P. Lovejoy on November 7, 1837, can be seen in the lobby of the Genealogy & Local History Library. The press yoke had been displayed for more than eighty years in the lobby of The Telegraph building in Downtown Alton. The Hearst Corporation bought The Telegraph in 2017, and they donated the yoke to the library in 2018 when the newspaper’s offices moved to a new building.

In 2019, a small group of Alton High School students and their teacher, Mrs. Lexa Browning-Needham, collaborated with René B. Johnson of the Genealogy & Local History Library to publish a rhyming alphabet picture book Alton ABC. Copies are available at the Genealogy & Local History Library, and a new coloring book, Color Me Alton, will also be available this May.

In 2020, the Coronavirus pandemic struck, and The Hayner Public Library District staff worked to develop innovative ways to serve patrons during this uncertain time. Dial-A-Story, which had first been popular in the 1970s, made a comeback. The Downtown Library and Hayner Library at Alton Square Mall started offering curbside pickup. The Genealogy & Local History Library digitized hundreds of books and photographs, and all databases were accessible remotely.

In 2022, things are somewhat back to normal, but we’ve retained some of the pandemic-related services that made using the library easier for patrons. Curbside pickup will remain an option indefinitely. Newspaper databases are still available remotely, and we’re adding more historical photographs to the Illinois Digital Archives every day. Both the Downtown Library and Hayner Library at Alton Square Mall have children and teen areas and offer programs in-person and virtually. Science with Sam, Dial-A-Story, story time programming, and take-home crafts are all available for children. Teens have movie theater outings, take-home-art projects, virtual escape rooms, and other specialized programming. Free musical performances, lectures, and genealogy programs are being offered in-person once again.

The Hayner Public Library District collection contains over 225,000 items. Nearly ten million items are available through interlibrary loan within the Illinois Heartland Library System. The library offers free e-books and audiobooks through the Cloud Library app. You can access free databases on crafting, auto repair, Consumer Reports, health, readers’ advisory, The Telegraph digital archives, and more from home using your Hayner Library card through our website or SHARE Mobile Library app. Computers, internet, and Wi-Fi access are available for use by patrons at all library locations. The library also provides laptops and hotspots for check out at the Downtown Library and Hayner Library at Alton Square Mall. You can also check out unique items such as telescopes, binoculars, fishing poles, 3D models, gardening kits, STEAM kits, and more for free with your Hayner Library card. The Hayner Public Library District has come a long way in the first fifty years, and we look forward to serving the Riverbend community for the next fifty and beyond.

African American Newspapers in Alton

Before today’s instant communications and twenty-four-hour news cycle, the only way to know what was going on in your neighborhood, state, or across the country and internationally was to check in with the neighbor who knew all, be in the thick of the happenings, or read about it in a newspaper. Historians and genealogists haunt these relics for evidence of individuals and families; economic, social, and cultural trends; geopolitical developments; and the occasional bit of gossip. In addition to the larger mainstream weeklies and dailies, many newspapers focused on labor, politics, ethnicity, and community. One of the earliest (1862-1900), and believed to be the first to subsequently become a daily newspaper published by a Black man in Illinois, was The Cairo Gazette. Such newspapers carried commentary on local, national, or international happenings but with the constituency’s lens. Many of these papers are lost to history because they weren’t published for very long, had a small circulation, or simply because no one thought to save them for the legacy they offered.

Family stories suggest that from 1903 through 1925, Mary Anne Green Hindman wrote a recurring column with highlights from the Rocky Fork area of Godfrey, Illinois. Mrs. Hindman carefully cut and pasted articles, advertisements, and columns in a scrapbook saved by her family. Several pieces include Mrs. Hindman’s byline and the column heading, “Godfrey, Illinois,” but they do not carry the name or date of publication. Perhaps her column, full of personal tidbits and community happenings, was a regular feature of a newspaper for which there is no other record.

One such publication was produced at St. John’s Baptist Church in Alton, Illinois. Rev. Thomas P. Wright, the church’s pastor from 1917 through 1984, studied printing at Shurtleff College. He employed this knowledge to print the church’s bulletins, programs, and a weekly community newspaper. To encourage young people in the church to be informed about their community, Rev. Wright taught them how to run the press and other trade skills. No known copies of their efforts remain.

Another alumnus of Shurtleff College, Fred L. Penny, established a club at the Booker T. Washington Community Center which focused on publishing a community newspaper. Established in 1936 by the Alton Negro Council and the city’s Playground and Recreation Commission, the Center stood at 5th and Belle streets in Alton, Illinois. The newspaper club continued under Mr. Penny’s direction after he became principal of Dunbar School (1937-1939). No known copies or details exist related to the club’s output.

By 1943, members of the Alton NAACP raised concerns about unfair, biased portrayals of the Black community in the Alton media. In answer, The Question newspaper was created on September 1, with Harold D. Johnson, editor, and Alton High School student Conway K. Graves, first as circulation manager and then as associate editor. Several prominent African Americans served as directors of the publication and feature writers. Just a few issues of The Question are known to have been in the files of the Black Pioneers Committee of the Alton Museum of History and Art. In those pages are articles on community issues and African American Altonians serving in World War II.

Madison County Courier began in 1985 with the following editor’s note:

“This paper is being published in the hope that communications between these towns will be greater enhanced and the various communities of Alton, Godfrey, Madison, Edwardsville, and surrounding towns will be linked in a chain of information and ideas. It is hoped that this chain will serve to bring about the greater development of leadership and fellowship among its citizens.

It is the Courier’s objective to publish a weekly newspaper that you feel is an asset to you and your community. Our objective is to bring to the forefront the positive things that are and can be found in our daily activities.”

Once again, a small group came together to both highlight and inform their community. They were dedicated to reaching beyond the boundaries of individual towns to highlight a collective need. Lead by editor Grace Monroe, a renowned educator and activist, the Courier, carried articles on local happenings, regional and national race politics. In less than a year, the Courier fell victim to financial issues and discontinued publication. Examples of these publications are held in local private collections.

Would that we had an uninterrupted view of how the African American community saw itself and its role in the larger community. Imagine the events, people, camaraderie, and examples of patriotic citizenship lost to time. Likewise, imagine the student and scholar who, at some distant time, take in hand a copy of one of these gems and finds themselves. From such humble bits of paper, ink, and dreams comes the legacy of people, time, and place.

National Arbor Day Celebrating 150 Years

Arbor Day was first established 150 years ago after newspaper editor J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska City, Nebraska, proposed a tree-planting holiday on April 10, 1872. It is estimated that more than one million trees were planted in Nebraska on the first Arbor Day! Americans now celebrate Arbor Day by planting trees annually to enrich the earth for future generations. Plant a tree to celebrate! Studies have shown that when you are around trees, stress is reduced, moods improve, and blood pressure lowers. Trees are good for your health and well-being. Urban street and park trees are just as important as rural forests.

New! Hayner Library’s Walking Book Club

Hayner Library is happy to introduce a new program, the Walking Book Club, starting in April.

A walking book club is like a regular book club, except you meet at a walking trail and get some exercise while chatting about books. Studies have shown that walking stimulates our brain and helps us to focus and be more creative. Our Walking Book Club integrates mental, physical, and social activities, improving brain health while enjoying the company of others! Come enjoy the fresh air and beautiful trails!

Join us in the great outdoors for our first meeting on Wednesday, April 13, at 12:00 p.m., at The Nature Institute. Frances Young, manager of Rehabilitation Services at OSF HealthCare, will talk about proper walking techniques. Afterward, we will walk the nature trail and discuss what books we wish to read as a group. Jean Shimunek, Reference librarian and Walking Book Club leader, will adjust the walk to be conducive to talking.

- Their Eyes Were Watching God by Nora Zeale Hurston. An all-time classic novel and masterpiece of the Harlem Renaissance.
- 52 Ways to Walk: The Surprising Science of Walking for Wellness and Joy, One Week at a Time by Annabel Streets. Explores the good things that can happen when walking.
- The Power of Fun: How to Feel Alive Again by Catherine Price. Fun isn’t optional, it is a must in our world today.
- The Hidden Life of Trees: What They Feel, How They Communicate: Discoveries from a Secret World by Peter Wohlleben. Tells the story of species interaction in the forest.
- Watership Down by Richard Adams. Chronicles the adventures of a group of rabbits searching for a safe place to establish a new warren where they can live in peace.

Registration is required for the Walking Book Club. Forms are available online at www.haynerlibrary.org, or pick one up at the library. For more information, please contact Jean at reference@haynerlibrary.org or call 618-462-0677, ext. 2849.
